DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
JANUARY 2001
Revised August 2001

List of Certain Foreign Institutions Classified as Official for Purposes of Reporting on the Treasury
International Capital (TIC) Forms

The attached list of foreign institutions, which conform to the definition of foreign official institutions on the Treasury International Capital (TIC) Forms, supersedes all previous lists. The definition of foreign official institutions in the instructions for the TIC Banking Forms and Form S reads:

"A FOREIGN OFFICIAL INSTITUTION includes the following:

1. Treasuries, including ministries of finance, or corresponding departments of national governments; central banks, including all departments thereof; stabilization funds, including official exchange control offices or other government exchange authorities; and diplomatic and consular establishments and other departments and agencies of national governments.
2. International and regional organizations.
3. Banks, corporations, or other agencies (including DEVELOPMENT BANKS and institutions that are majority-owned by central governments) that are fiscal agents of national governments, performing activities similar to those of a treasury, central bank, stabilization fund, or exchange control authority."

Although the attached list includes the major foreign official institutions which have come to the attention of the Federal Reserve Banks and the Department of the Treasury, it does not purport to be exhaustive. Whenever a question arises whether or not an institution should, in accordance with the instructions on the TIC forms, be classified as official, the Federal Reserve Bank with which you file reports should be consulted.

It should be noted that the list does not in every case include all alternative names applying to the same institution. For example, the list does not include all the administrative departments of the foreign central governments nor all special or sub-accounts of foreign official institutions, although all are to be treated as official. In cases in which legations have been changed to embassies, the embassy is shown on the list; reporting institutions continuing to hold an account in the name of the legation, however, should consider it as official.

These instructions are also pertinent to international and regional organizations that are included in the definition of foreign official institutions.
